

Remember Me Always

On Tuesday morning when Hermione woke up to a soft summer breeze, she could smell the salty air of the seacoast. She had always loved living by the sea and she couldn't believe that she would be leaving. Her mother and father were divorced, and her father lived in North Carolina. She missed him a lot. She would be moving to Mint Hill, North Carolina, two days after school was out. It was Friday she wasn't at school because of packing. She would only have a few days to say good-bye and pack. But what bothered her most was that she'd be leaving her best friend, the athletic, the fun, the crazy, Dove. Dove and Hermione had so much fun together. Hermione was going to miss her.

It was moving day. She had gone out and said her good-byes the day before. Only Dove was there on moving day. Dove called Hermione over before she left and with tears in her eyes said “Remember, if you ever need me leave the window open in your bedroom.” Hermione was puzzled. She nodded but, she couldn't speak and she also had tears in her eyes as she said goodbye. Hermione was on her way to Mint Hill! When they arrived, Emm (Hermione's older sister) said Hermione got first pick for her room. Hermione went into the house looking for the perfect room. After twenty minutes of looking she finally decided on the third floor bedroom! It had one window and wallpaper with doves all over it. Hermione loved the room because it reminded her of Dove, and she loved writing and there was an old fashion desk. Hermione went to the window and opened it. “I can almost smell the ocean from here” She said. She heard a bell. It was her mum calling her for dinner. Hermione immediately left not wishing to miss dinner for she was very hungry. She left the window wide open. As soon as she left a salty breeze came in through the window and something magical happened. The week before Hermione had written a story about dove and herself. She had finished the story but couldn't think of a title. When Hermione came back from dinner she found that a dove was missing from the wallpaper. She found that dove alive and sitting on a piece of paper! As she got closer she found that it was her story about Dove and herself. But it was different because it had a title. The story was now called Remember Me Always. She wondered who it was from. Then she remembered what Dove had said before she left “if you ever need me leave your window open in your bedroom.”
